"POP BOTTLE RIOT" VICTIM DIES IN AKRON

Dunn Field Baseball Fight Costs Life of Spectator.

STRUCK ON HEAD

Lee Porter, 28, Succumbs to Fractured Skull.

AKRON, O., May 15.—(INS)—The "pop bottle riot" at Dunn field in Cleveland last Saturday, during the ball game between Cleveland and Philadelphia, resulted in one casualty today when Lee Porter, 28, died in a hospital here of a fractured skull.

A shower of pop bottles fell on the field when a Umpire William Campbell called Lou Fonseca, of the Indians, out at first base on a bunt. Umpire Emmett T. Ormsby, on the third base line, was hit by a bottle, suffering a concussion of the brain. He is reported recovering in a Cleveland hospital and is expected to resume his duties in the near future.

Porter, a spectator, was also hit by a flying bottle. It was revealed today, but apparently only slightly dazed at the time, and returned here with a party of friends.

He became ill Sunday and was removed to a hospital yesterday afternoon, when it was revealed that he had suffered a fractured skull. He died this morning. The body is to be taken to Buffalo, Porter's former home.

Mellon Rumors.
Switzerland Votes Wet.
Chewing the Clippings.

By ARTHUR KRIBBANE.
(Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WALL STREET "enjoyed" a bad day Monday, thanks to rumors, and, perhaps a few facts.
One rumor told of Mr. Mellon's coming resignation. Mr. Mellon is not that sort of person. When he is through with his job, and feels like attending to his own business, he will resign. Nobody will crowd him into resigning.

WHEN he does resign, the people should find a way to show their gratitude for service rendered by the ablest secretary of the treasury in the history of the United States.

THERE is "always good in evil," and little lumps that saw values shrinking will, perhaps, find comfort in the fact that the price collapse meant happiness for Federal Reserve gentlemen.

They had not been very successful in efforts to smash the market thus far, and even a little success must be gratifying.

EVERY one of the 24 cantons in Switzerland voted against prohibition and local option. The Swiss, a small people, have ruled themselves and kept as sober as they cared to be, for many centuries.

THE proposed prohibition law would not have affected beers and wines. European countries having always used them temperately, do not call them "intoxicating."

The Swiss, in every one of the 24 cantons, expressed the opinion concerning strong alcoholic liquors that they would continue to drink them as they thought best, rather than let some law decide it for them.

THE fight against drugs is particularly difficult.

A prisoner in California received several newspaper clippings, editorials containing lofty advice.

The prison chief said, "You can't have them unless the editor of the publication sends them to you direct."

THE reason is interesting. Men soak newspaper clippings in a liquid containing strong drugs. The clippings are dried, then sent to convicts and the convicts instead of reading them, chew them, and extract the drugs.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, head of the British Labor party, a self-educated and WELL educated man, urges Britons to vote for Labor at the coming election.

His vote will be very big. Lord Beaverbrook, who belongs to the many-time-millionaire party, believes that Labor will poll the biggest vote.

UNFORTUNATELY for Ramsay MacDonald's sincerity and earnestness, the only one thing and practice is another.

65-HOUR VOYAGE

German Airship Will Fly North of Azores.

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Internal News Service Staff Correspondent.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 15.—The great German dirigible Graf Zeppelin will leave for Lakehurst, N. J., at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning (German time). It was announced this afternoon by Dr. Hugo Eckener, head of the Zeppelin works and director of the trans-Atlantic flight.

The signs will be erected for the school term and then taken down during the summer vacation.

Baker also plans to change the operation of the three traffic signal lights at Ninth and Main street, Tenth and Center, and Tenth and Commerce.

Improve Smith Street!

If city council has an ear to the ground, it is not improbable that action looking toward the permanent improvement of Smith street, or East Seventh street as it is termed, will be taken at a session which is expected to be held this week.

Since early in the year, the question pertaining to the opening of the link between Dresden and Lincoln avenues as a means of coping with the heavy traffic over the new East Liverpool-Youngstown highway has been forgotten. Council has done nothing on legislation since the enactment providing for the improvement of the entire thoroughfare. Mayor Benedum's veto of the proposal seemingly ended all discussion insofar as the lawmakers are concerned.

Realizing the need of some solution of the traffic problem, which is becoming serious at the intersection of Dresden avenue and the Diamond, Service-Safety Director Moore and Street Commissioner McLaughlin are making some repairs to Smith street. While this will afford some relief, it is a temporary job.

Difference of opinion in council pertains to the extent of the improvement—whether from Dresden to Lincoln avenue or merely from Green lane to the eastern outlet. And there is much argument in favor of the stand that it would be a waste of money to wreck the western end of the street which is a comparatively recent improvement.

Council should lose no time in reaching a decision. City traffic conditions demand that the street be opened before mid-summer.

Two Aspects of Theater

The American theater audience spends its money to be amused. It insists on a laugh whether the laugh is intended or not. Theaters presenting a consistent diet of thought-provoking drama are usually the smaller ones with seasons limited to a few months out of the year.

The purpose of the theater is controversial. It has been a subject of heated discussion from the early days of the Greek times, through the growing period of the medieval mystery plays, over the bosoms of Elizabethan sentimentality, up the mountain of standards set by the greatest of playwrights, William Shakespeare, over the dangers of Cromwell's regime, past the sticky frothiness of the Restoration period and down to the present time. Every school has had its theory and no one school has been undisputed in its claims.

Drama has developed diversely in different countries. England has, perhaps, made the largest single contribution to American drama, which, at its best, is little more than the blackest sheep of a spotty family. The greatest progress that has been made in the drama of the new world has been a negative one; the blood and thunder spectacle of early days has been discarded, but nothing very definite has taken its place, unless the more recent movements display a fruitfulness that is doubtful.

Measured by financial success, the girl show is the present fancy. A few songs, a few clothes and much contemporaneous wit never fail to bring the shinkles rolling into the coffers. Horror plays and sentimentality expositions are good attractions, also.

The American movie is a youth member of the family. It is barely able to rear its head with members of the drama that have stood the test of centuries. It indicates by its early movements that it is going to ape every other member of the family and let the public decide which movement is the best.

Farce never fails. The American audience is always ready to laugh. Horror plays, now that they are fortified by sound, are effective, but the rest are still in doubt. Sentimentality, which never fails to give American spectators a thrill is confused with sentiment and the audience is likely to laugh at the most inopportune moments. Real acting, other than a few primitive motions of the hips and eyes, is apparently beyond the ken of the theatergoer, who is determined to be amused at everything and anything.

There is no way to check the inopportune raucous laughter of the vacuum-headed theatergoer, who has paid his good American dollars into the box office. He cannot be thrown out, because that would be a transgression of the sacred rights of American freedom. He must be put to shame by the disapproval of those whom he irritates by his bawdy actions, and it is to be hoped that Americans will learn to give equal recognition to both aspects of the theater—the laughing side and the serious side.

Telephones on Trains

The number of places where a person may be safe from the queries and impertinent answers of his friends and enemies has decreased until the end is almost in sight. The other day on the Allandale division of the Canadian National railways, a man picked up a telephone and talked to another man in Toronto. It was the first "two-way" telephone conversation to be conducted from a moving train, although one-way conversations have been in practical operation for some time.

The services will be installed on trains in the United States wherever possible and as quickly as possible. It is to the credit of Americans that they are not slow to adopt new methods when they are offered.

Consider what it will mean. In its lighter aspects, it will mean that the forgetful husband who forgets to tell the milkman to stop the milk while the family is on its vacation will be able to do so before the first two quarts have been wasted. It will mean that there will be no escape from friend wife, not even a momentary one. Her admonitions in the matter of overshoes and heavy underclothing will be constant and there will be no limit to the number of questions and answers.

In business, it will mean that the executive will be in almost constant contact with the outside world. It will effect a vast saving in time, expense and trouble. It is another stride toward the nearing goal of 100 per cent efficiency.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—A direct appeal for a return to inflation, as opposed to deflation, of money credits in the agricultural states of the union, was thrown into the arena of farm relief discussion in the senate by Senator W. B. Pine, of Oklahoma, and the frank use of the word inflation did much to clear the air of mystery and misunderstanding surrounding the farm relief measure pending before the special session of congress.

Comparing the figures on Federal Reserve discounts out of 1928 with those of 1929, Senator Pine showed that in 1928 Massachusetts, an industrial state, discounted 87 per cent as much in bills as in 1929, while Iowa, an agricultural state, discounted but 8 per cent of what it did in 1929.

"They were equally inflated and equally prosperous in 1929," declared the Oklahoma. "In 1928 Massachusetts had inflation and property and Iowa has deflation and depression."

"When the rural sections have the same credit supply, or the same inflation, as the industrial sections, there will be no farm problem."

In a genuine effort to understand what farm relief means as a business proposition, stripped of the vast amount of political time, Senator Pine's words are quoted because they are so frankly non-political. The Oklahoma, coming from an agricultural state, happens to be one of the plain business men of the senate who seldom makes speeches and has little patience with political debate. When he made a long, carefully prepared speech on farm relief, he called many things by their first names.

The comparison of Iowa with Massachusetts was a mild statement of the case. While Massachusetts banks in 1928 discounted 87 per cent as much commercial paper with the Federal Reserve bank as they did in 1929 at the peak of inflation, Pennsylvania, another industrial state, did 125 per cent of its 1929 discounting, and Ohio did 153 per cent. Also the senator might have cited Montana as a hard hit agricultural state, since its discounts with the federal reserve were but 5 per cent of the 1929 volume.

Senator Pine was not speaking in favor of any form of farm relief bill. He was suggesting that the president, by executive authority, could compel the Federal Reserve board to proceed directly with inflation of credits in the farming states.

His point was simply that when the deflation policy of 1929 was adopted, it was a temporary remedy in the industrial centers of the nation, but a permanent treatment of the agricultural centers. They are still deflated, while the industrial states have since bounced back to a status of credits as liberal as those of the war peak. Deflation as a whole hit bottom in 1924, the lowest point of credit used since the war. Since then the commercial credit situation has come up to a status often higher than the war top. Yet in Iowa, North Dakota, and Montana, for example, 1928 discounts with the federal reserve were far below those of even 1924. The farm states believe that this withdrawal of bank credits is the basic reason for the impoverishment of the farmer. They think it has not only hurt his borrowing power, a harm perhaps partly offset by farm loan bank credits, but has lowered the value of his land and decreased the prices of his crops. As a remedy, call it by any other name is you choose, they want a return to inflation.

Contrasted with the political debates which are reported day by day in congress, this dealing with the raw stuff of economics is strong medicine. Compared with Senators Watson of Indiana and Robinson of Arkansas, accusing their opposing parties of inconsistency in having once voted for the equalization fee and once against it, or with Senator Borah announcing that he is favorably inclined to a debenture plan but thinks it should be in the tariff bill and not the farm bill, it is straight talk. It disregards how anybody voted on any proposition, or what any party or partisan thinks, and therefore is out of line with much of the current discussion in the halls of congress, but it reveals farm relief in a clear light to the average citizen.

The credit system for marketing proposed under the farm relief bill now pending in congress is much more involved than the direct action suggested in the speech by Senator Pine, but it aims at least somewhat in the same direction. The bill would give to the proposed farm board a revolving fund of $500,000,000 for loans to marketing agencies, chiefly, in all probability, to co-operative agencies of farmers.

Senator Pine, who is personally a conservative business man and politically a more or less conservative Republican, served to bring farm relief discussion to a clearer basis when he talked inflation in plain language. He thinks the farmers need the same financial medicine that is good for the manufacturers. Anybody can understand that, whether he agrees with it or not.

Questions And Answers

By Frederic J. Haskin.

The answers to questions printed here each day are specimens picked from the mass of inquiries handled by our great Information Bureau maintained in Washington, D. C. This valuable service is for the free use of the public. Ask any question of fact you may want to know and you will get an immediate reply. Write plainly, enclose two cents in coin or stamps for return postage, and address the East Liverpool Review Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C.

Q. How does the number of radio sets in use today compare with the number seven years ago? J. E. S.

A. Radio Retailing says that in 1922 there were approximately 60,000 in the United States, and that now there are more than 11,000,000.

Q. At the time that the Waldorf-Astoria closed, I read that it was the principal hotel in New York City. Does that refer to its size or to the number of people who patronized it? T. W.

A. It was not the largest hotel in New York City, but some idea of its clientele may be gained by the fact that it carried 350,000 charge accounts in Greater New York alone.

Q. Why are some beaches such as Daytona hard enough to drive a car on while others are so soft that a person walking sinks ankle deep in the sand? J. J. C.

A. The geological survey states that the reason some sand is hard enough for driving and other sand is soft, is due to the shape of the grains. Where the grains of sand are rounded, driving is not possible and the sand is soft. At Daytona Beach, the sand grains have sharp corners and the sand forms a hard surface for driving.

Q. Is it true that dead rats are found in the receptacles in which bootleg alcohol is made? J. H. F.

A. James O'Donnell Bennett says that dead rats are often found in the barrels of mash which are confiscated. The rats are attracted by the smell of yeast and sugar, are overcome by the fumes, and fall into the liquor.

NEW YORK Day By Day

By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, May 15.—No mystery tale writer has ever pictured a more gloomy, forbidding and mysterious house than the famous Wendel mansion on Fifth Avenue at 39th street. The stranger passing it for the first time usually draws up short with a suggestion of a shudder at its rack and ruin.

Flanked on all sides with towering minarets, its shabby brown brick and scrofulous exterior has the bear of an autumn leaf. It is an incongruous touch in the avenue's magnificence. The windows are screened by dilapidated shutters that frequently flap ghostly in high winds.

Among the superstitious is the belief it is haunted. The single occupant is Miss Ella B. Wendel, aged 76. Rarely is there a show of light at night, save for the feeble blob in the vast gas-lit hall near the street. About it all is an eerie and lachrymose sentimentality, the melancholy of rain drips through a cottage roof.

Almost every night it has been my custom for years to walk past the house late while a dog. One night I heard the sullen jingle of a door bell in the inner depths of the depressing pile. Some one—a messenger, I believe—was at the front door. There was the muffled unbolting of locks.

The door suddenly opened and there was a fleeting glimpse of a shriveled and cadaverous figure in night dress. One hand held a candle, and another claw-like hand fairly snatched something from the messenger's hand. Never before or since have I seen the slightest show of life in the house.

Next door is the famous "million dollar yard" with the high board fence. Real estate brokers have tried vainly to buy it, but according to tradition it is preserved solely as a playground for a venerable and toothless French poodle. Miss Wendel is reputed never to have visited a theater.

She leaves her home only at long intervals for a short drive in a closed cab to the park. The rest of the time is spent largely piously contemplating life in a musty library. With a married sister, 86, she shares a $10,000,000 estate. The fortune was accumulated by the original Wendel who would buy but never sell real estate.

To the majority of New Yorkers.

The Cabinet.

Little Johnny comes home from school to announce that his teacher has directed him to bring back a list containing the names of the members of the president's cabinet. So he asks his father for it and his father says, now, let me see, there's Mellon, who is the secretary of the treasury, and then there is the secretary of state, Kellogg. But no, they have had a change lately and it isn't Kellogg any more. Wait a moment, Jones is sure to know.

So father calls Jones on the telephone and asks him who is secretary of state, and Jones says he is not certain, but he thinks it is Charles Evans Hughes. Father says he knows it is not Hughes, but while he is about it does Jones know who is secretary of the navy, Jones says he can't be sure, but he is the descendant of a former president; he thinks it is one of the Roosevelts. But father says he knows it isn't a Roosevelt, as he has read the papers and all these Roosevelts are Democrats or hunting big game in the Himalayas, and that Jones is more ignorant than he is.

Then father says he will try to think them up himself. Now, there is the secretary of commerce. He instinctively thinks of Hoover, but it can't be Hoover as Hoover is president. And there is the secretary of labor, Samuel Gompers. But no, Samuel Gompers is dead and he cannot recall who succeeded him. And then there is the secretary of education, but for the life of him he cannot remember who that is.

And there is the postmaster-general. He doesn't know, but Smith is sure to. So he calls Smith on the telephone and Smith says isn't it Will Hays? And father says, well, now, perhaps it is. While he is about it, who is secretary of war, Mr. Smith has an idea it is General Pershing, or is General Pershing Ambassador to France? So father thanks Smith and tells him he has been a great help.

Father says there remains the secretary of the interior and agriculture to account for, but he can never remember them unless they do something dishonest. After all, as nobody seems to be very certain of their information perhaps it is safer to call up the public library. Little Johnny says he doesn't see any sense in his teacher giving him a question like that.

But his father says: "Johnny, you mustn't talk that way. Every good citizen should know who the members of the cabinet are."—Baltimore Sun.

BATTERIES
SERVICE STATION

This sign is on our place of business. We sell the Exide, made by The Electric Storage Battery Co., but we cheerfully service all makes.

To WIVES
whose husbands always put things off

THIS advertisement is addressed to those long-suffering wives who know from experience that "the best way to get a thing done is to do it yourself."

Getting a husband to mail a letter is child's play compared to making him remember to have the battery in the car inspected regularly. But at this time of the year, when you're taking long trips and doing plenty of night driving, it's highly important to always keep your battery in A-1 condition.

So here's our suggestion: Why not put the Exide Service Station on your shopping list and drive in at least once every two weeks so that we can look your battery over?

NAGEL-WILSON HIT AT CERAMIC "VOICE OF CITY" MACK SUCCESS

Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson are teamed in "Kid Gloves." Warner Bros. latest picture, which comes to the Ceramic theater tomorrow for a run of three days.

With the two screen favorites are cast Edward Earle, Edna Murphy, Maude Turner Gordon, Richard Cramer, Tommy Dugan and John Davidson. The exciting underworld melodrama was written by Fred Myrton and adapted for the screen by Robert Lord.

The fun begins when a society girl finds herself in a taxi in the hottest of a gun battle in which the notorious hijacker, "Kid Gloves" Smith leads the van. Carried unconscious into the flat of a woman shoplifter by the driver, the strange girl is later confronted by the redoubtable Kid himself, who enters by the window, stowing his gat as he lands.

The girl's influential fiancé has her shadowed, and being informed by his spy of the girl's whereabouts comes in a rage and finding her with the Kid—calls a justice and forces them to be married. This is only the beginning of some breath-taking action.

"The Voice of the City." Willard Mack's all-talking picture, a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which will open at the American theater tomorrow, marks one of the "Big Five" of present-day playwrights.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer know what they were doing when they signed Mr. Mack to write, direct and play in a one hundred per cent talking picture. Mack stands out among playwrights as a master of crisp, dramatic dialogue. Through the years he has had an unbroken record of successes. These include such stage plays as "Common Sin," "Gang War," "Tiger Rose," "The Man Who Came Back," "The Scarlet Fox," "Lily Sue," "Weather-Clear," "The Noose," "Kick In" and "The Big Chance."

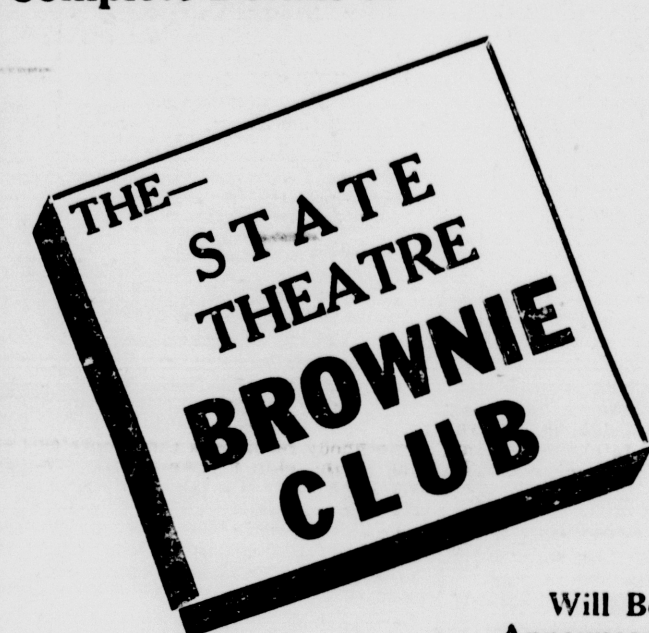

Mack's great contribution to the stage has been in realistic, true-to-life stories of the seamy side of big cities. "The Voice of the City" is such a tale. It relates the adventures, through 24 hours, of an escaped convict, and the hard-boiled detective who pursues him. In that 24 hours are packed a lovely romance, near-tragedy, human and gripping bits of characterization, and a striking and interesting climax.

To make his picture Mr. Mack gathered together a group of players who had aided him at various times in making his great stage success. These include the young New York matinee idol, Robert Ames, Beatrice Banyard, Sylvia Field, Alice Moe, Clark Marshall, John Miljan, James Farley and Tom McGuire. Mack's own part is Doyle, the detective, a fine characterization played as only Willard Mack can do this type of a part.

MISS PICKFORD WINS NEW HONOR

In "Coquette," her first all-talking picture, now playing at the State theater, Miss Pickford adds another title to her long scroll of screen honors. Known always as the "girl with the perfect photographic face," she now proves that she is "the woman with the perfect screen voice." In this picture her tones range from the light, resiliency of the youthful and gay episodes, to the deep and throbbing maturity of the dramatic scenes. As the

LIONS OPEN STATE SESSION

Play Clapsaddle Goes To Convention in Youngstown.

Play Clapsaddle will be the representative of the Lions' club at the state convention today and Thursday at the Ohio Hotel, Youngstown. It was announced at the weekly dinner of the club last night in the grill room of the Travelers' hotel, East Fourth street.

Other members who will attend are: Louis M. Capehart, Karl Gero, William S. Foulks, Dr. John A. Fraser, D. J. Savelsberg, Dr. C. A. Shafer, George and Harry Brokaw, H. S. Lindell and Edwin Wheeler.

The convention opened this morning at 9 o'clock. This afternoon's session included a discussion of Lionism by Earle W. Hodges, second vice-president of Lions International. Tonight will be celebrated as "Ohio night," with an entertainment in the hotel for the men and a theater party for the wives.

Melvin Jones, international secretary general, will be the principal speaker at the business session at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. A recreation period will be held Thursday afternoon.

The convention will close with a banquet tomorrow night.

Little coquette, Miss Pickford runs the entire gamut of human emotions, and her voice echoes harmoniously her many moods.

The greatest charm of the voice which speaks from the shadowed lips of Miss Pickford is its truthfulness to the personality of its speaker. Her tones catch the very spirit of the young woman on the screen. In "Coquette" she is bringing her true self to the screen, a cultured, poised, brilliant woman. Her voice possesses the flawless diction of culture and the finished smoothness of poise and experience.

This is the first time that the voice of Mary Pickford has been heard since her childhood years behind the footlights of the theater. With a fundamental knowledge of the theater and the use of the human voice, Miss Pickford was, in the beginning, a lap ahead of the screen luminaries whose only experience has been before the cameras.

With her usual perfection of detail Miss Pickford studied the intricacies of the sound recording devices, and rehearsed herself and her company until each inflection, each tone, of their voices was as near perfect as human agency could make it.

Cantonese Use Gunboats And Planes in Shek-lung Attack.

LONDON, May 15.—(INS.)—Fifteen hundred casualties have taken place as the result of a heated battle between Cantonese nationalists and Kwangsi troops at Shek-lung, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Hongkong today.

It was officially announced, the dispatch stated, that Cantonese troops, aided by gunboats and fifteen airplanes, launched the attack against the Kwangsi, who retreated in disorder and with great loss after several hours of fighting.

The retreating troops were hotly pursued by snipers in the airplanes. Additional fighting took place near Samshui, the gateway to Canton, the messengers continued. Cantonese gunboats fired upon Kwangsi vessels attempting to land troops near Samshui, killing and wounding many and capturing several boats.

The allied Cantonese armies have captured Kwelling and Pinglo without bloodshed. Samshui remains in the possession of Canton troops.

55 AIRPLANES OFF TO DEFEND OHIO CAPITAL

Red Aerial Army Leaves Selfridge Field, Mich.

BLUES AT DAYTON

Score of Airmen Forced Down by Adverse Weather.

Ohio became the mecca for the "pride" of the United States air and ground forces today and feverish preparations were being rushed as the zero hour in the mock war, which will give the Buckeye state a taste of the realistic during the next ten days, approached.

At one minute after midnight the mythical war will begin. A "red" army, composed of more than 100 airplanes and augmented by hundreds of ground troops will defend Columbus and eastern Ohio.

A "blue" army, of similar strength, with headquarters supposedly at Dayton, will attack the red air forces and be attacked in turn. It will represent western Ohio.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., May 15.—(INS.)—Commanded by Major Ralph Joyce, 55 airplanes took off from Selfridge field early today for Norton field, Columbus, O., where until May 25 they will be based as part of the Red aerial army that will defend the Ohio capital from invasion by the Blue air forces based on Fairfield air depot, Dayton, O.

The fleet, consisting of 42 pursuit planes, eight observation planes and five transports, constituted the largest formation group that has ever left Selfridge field.

Safe Landings Made.

PITTSBURGH, May 15.—(INS.)—En route for the 11-day maneuvers of land and air forces in the Fifth Corps area at Columbus, O., more than a score of army pursuit and bombing planes today were topped down in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and eastern Ohio—unable to successfully combat adverse weather and poor visibility.

Reports here were that all the planes—22 in number—had made safe landings, although several reported difficulty in coming down on rain-soaked ground in unfamiliar sections. It was the second time the squadrons had been forced down since Sunday when 31 planes, from Mitchell field, L. I., and Langley field, Va., were forced to take shelter at Burgess field, Uniontown, Pa., after running into a terrific wind and rain storm near Moundsville, W. Va.

Four Land and Steubenville. Of the 22 ships reported down early today, one, a bomber from Langley field, was at Burgess field; four were reported safely landed at an emergency field at Steubenville, O.; two near Zanesville, O.; 13 at Langley field, Moundsville, W. Va.; one at Elkins and one at Morgantown in the same state.

Visibility over the Allegheny mountains was said to be "terrible" by pilots who were unable to cross them and turned back to the various fields to wait for better flying weather.

The recent plan to close cotton mills in the American section of the Lancashire spinning trade on Saturdays and Mondays for a month, has failed.

mind today and decided not to make the air voyage, she told International News Service.

Her husband had recently called and telephoned her from New York not to run the risk of an airship flight from Germany to America, but Mrs. Pierce maintained her determination until this afternoon. Even then it was not absolutely certain she would not change her mind again.

"I am sending my husband a cablegram that I am not going on the Graf Zeppelin," said Mrs. Pierce. "But, hasn't a woman the right to change her mind?"

Three persons who attempted to stowaway on the Zeppelin were arrested and will be prosecuted. A youth had made a similar attempt on Monday, when Dr. Hugo Eckener, head of the Zeppelin works, announced that all future stowaways would be prosecuted.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(INS.)—Secretary of State Stimson, at the request of Henry J. Pierce, of New York, has cabled the American embassy in Berlin, authorizing it to use its influence with Mrs. Mae Pierce to persuade her against taking passage on the Graf Zeppelin.

"Husband very earnestly requests she abandon trip," Stimson's cable said.

"You are authorized to use such influence as may be consistent with your official duties to induce her to comply with husband's wishes."

WHIPPET RACE BETS ARE HIT

Gov. Cooper Aims "No Gambling" Edict at Dog Track.

COLUMBUS, O., May 15.—(INS.)—A "no gambling" proclamation was issued here today by Gov. Myers. Y. Cooper, in connection with the scheduled Whippet race at the West Jefferson dog track, opening Saturday. The chief executive also added that he expects Madison county officials to enforce the state laws against the gambling, without further instructions.

Clean sportsmanship, or persons paying admission to see the dogs run, is not opposed by the chief executive, but "law enforcement officers are expected to do their duty in connection with gambling," Cooper said.

Free tickets, termed "for bearer and party" for the duration of the season, which is contemplated to be a 30-day meet, have been issued by the hundred, according to B. A. Sergeant, treasurer of the West Jefferson Kennel club. The pari-mutuel system of betting is to be employed, Sergeant also stated.

Sheriff E. U. Blancher of Madison county, has indicated that he has made no preparations to interfere with the races and Dr. G. M. Kerr, president of the West Jefferson council revealed that the village looks to the races as a source of much-needed revenue. The governor has power to remove a sheriff, mayor or chief of police for failure to enforce the laws.

STEPFATHER HELD IN BOY'S DEATH

CINCINNATI, O., May 15.—James Brannon, 23, stepfather of 17-year-old Edward Lucas, whose body was found along the railroad tracks near Bedford Ind., May 8, last, has been taken into custody by local authorities and is being held for investigation.

Coroner O. D. Emerson, of Bedford, arrived here yesterday and expressed the belief Lucas was not a victim of an accident. He told Chief of Detectives Kirgan that a blood-stained coupling pin, found a short distance from the body, strengthened the murder theory.

Brannon, it is said, is the beneficiary on a double indemnity clause in insurance policy on Lucas.

Local Officer Lauds This Herbal Discovery

To Really Appreciate What It Does In Constipation and Stomach Disorders, It Must Be Tried.

Young and old, men and women in all walks of life are enthusiastic friends of this Indian Herb Remedy, Owa-Ton-Na. Not a day passes but that the Owa-Ton-Na nurse listens to those who come back to give thanks for what Owa-Ton-Na has done for them.

"Owa-Ton-Na certainly is a fine medicine," says John Cole, well known police officer of Wellsville, who resides at 612 15th street, Wellsville. He says: "For two years I have been suffering with constipation and most of the disorders which this condition brings on."

"I was troubled with frequent attacks of indigestion, gas and bloating spells. My appetite was very poor. At times, I would get very dizzy and have frequent headaches. My system must have been full of poisons as at times, my joints would ache and every-one knows how uncomfortable that is."

"I must say that Owa-Ton-Na certainly made a big change in my condition and to appreciate what it really does, one must try it and it is certainly worth that to anyone who suffers with the conditions for which it is recommended."

"My appetite has improved 100% and I don't have to be afraid now that when I eat, I am going to have those sour, bloating spells of indigestion. Owa-Ton-Na just seems to cleanse the system from top to bottom."

You, too, if you are suffering, will experience a great surprise after taking even one bottle of this medicine. It is a stomach cleanser made of roots, herbs, barks and berries, for

THOUSANDS WATCH HER FAMOUS HANDS

Irma Wright, Champion

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Miss Irma Wright, world's amateur champion typist, demonstrates her speed and methods to audiences all over the country. Since the championship contest last September, huge gatherings in city after city have watched her skilled hands at work.

Her speeding fingers, so smooth and white, never betray the fact that Miss Wright keeps house... and washes dishes, too!

"I used to hate dishwashing," she says frankly, "because it left my hands embarrassingly red and so roughened that it reacted on my speed. Of course the soaps I was using were to blame. I knew that the minute I tried Lux in my dishpan, Lux felt entirely different from ordinary soaps. Lux suds were soothing!"

"And my hands were whiter and softer after doing the dishes than before! Now I wouldn't think of doing dishes with anything but Lux—Lux makes it so much easier to be both home-maker and champion."

LAUGHLIN CUTS POTTERY WASTE, SURVEY SHOWS

Newell Company Lauded By Committee at Washington.

OBJECTS CITED
Innovations are Adopted To Effect Economic Changes.

Homer Laughlin China company, with plants in Newell and East Liverpool, has adopted innovations that are helping eliminate economic waste in the United States, according to President Hoover's committee on recent economic changes.

The committee is a subcommittee of the president's unemployment conference which came into being in 1921, although the committee on recent economic changes was named last year.

President Hoover is its chairman, and its members include Postmaster General Walter F. Brown; President William Green of the American Federation of Labor; Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric company; John J. Raskob, Governor Smith's campaign manager last fall, and other prominent men.

Reduction of costs in industry and elimination of waste are two prime objects of the committee. To aid in this undertaking, it has been carrying on an exhaustive study of industries. The report is about to be published in two large volumes by the McGraw-Hill company, a New York publishing house, whose magazine, "Radio Retailing," is now edited by O. H. Caldwell, who recently resigned as federal radio commissioner.

A questionnaire was sent to representative manufacturers and to laboratories engaged in investigation of industrial processes. The answers, along with data obtained by investigators, constitute the basis of the mass of facts in the report.

Body Lost; Funeral Delayed.

When mourners from all parts of Scotland gathered for the funeral of Albert Edward Herbert Mounbray recently they were informed that the ceremonies must be postponed because the body could not be found. Admiral Mounbray had died at Hyeres, France, a few days before, and the body and coffin were shipped to his home at Dalgety, Scotland. The funeral day was set, floral offerings sent to the Mounbray home, the grave was dug, services at the home and the grave arranged, and the mourners arrived, but the body did not appear. English railway officials had no arrival, and French authorities were ignorant of its whereabouts. After a two-days' search it was found at the French border where it had been held by the French Customs authorities who were searching the coffin for possible smuggled dope.

Wellsville And Newell City League Clubs Plan Player Deal

Laughlin to Get Baker For Infielder Simcox

Nicholson Gives up Southpaw Flinger in Order to Strengthen Hot Corner; Chester, K. T. K., to Play Saturday.

MANAGER JOE DICKEY of Homer Laughlin and Pilot Roy Nicholson of Wellsville last night effected the first player trade of the 1929 Inter-City Baseball league campaign.
The deal sends "Lefty" Baker, Wellsville southpaw hurler, to the West Virginia champions for Harry Simcox, third baseman, and the transaction, apparently, fills gaps in both lineups where filling is needed the most.
While the trade lacks final confirmation, it is entirely likely that the arrangement will stand.
Simcox rates among the leading third sackers of the circuit. His defensive and offensive performances for Homer Laughlin last summer were important factors in the march of the Potters to the league championship.
Baker's pitching can be used very handily by the Laughlin club, and, for that matter, any team in the loop would be glad to make a place for the southpaw curver.

Dickey's biggest problem, he says, is his pitching. Dugman, ace of the Newell staff, injured a finger Saturday at Chester and will not be ready to go at top speed for sometime yet.
Dunlevy was hit pretty hard by the Chester clubbers.
A proposed trade between K. T. K.
and Laughlin, broached by Manager Jack Orr of the Ohio potters, whereby he would send Ray Pollock, pitcher, to Newell for Pumpreys, catcher, was not accepted by the Newell leader.
Arrangements were made by Orr of the Katies and Les McMath of Chester whereby the postponed game of Monday night will be played off Saturday afternoon at Smith Field, Chester. The game time will be 3:30.

Browns' Fall, Tigers' Rise, Big Surprises

Detroit, Coming up With Rush, Looms as Con- tender.

By Les Conklin.
NEW YORK, May 15.—The first series of inter-sectional battles in the American league will lend today. The fall of the Browns and the rise of Detroit have been the outstanding surprises of the East Vs. West contests.
The Browns, who led the league before the eastern teams journeyed westward, have dropped six out of eight contests with the invaders.
Detroit, practically left at the post at the start of the race, has come with a rush and now looms as the strongest western contender.
Philadelphia has won five and lost three on the trip and the Yankees copped seven out of ten, the Yanks gaining one game. The Athletics are leading the league by half a game today by virtue of their 10 to 8 win over the Tigers yesterday while the Yanks were idle.
Lefty Grove, rushed from the bull pen in the ninth, saved the game by fanning two men with the bases full.
Each team used four twirlers.
Pat Malone, Chicago strikeout artist who had won all of his five starts, was sent against the Braves and lost a twelve-inning battle, 6 to 5. The Cubs dropped back to a tie for the National league lead with the Cardinals, who were idle.
Hits by James and Spohrer broke up the game, which was the first extra-inning contest played in Boston this season. Malone struck out seven men.

FAVORITES NOT IN DERBY TRIAL

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.—Turf enthusiasts who hoped the derby trial would furnish an inkling of the probable outcome of the Kentucky derby next Saturday, were agreed today that yesterday's dash, won by Windy City, supplied scant enlightenment.

Usually the derby trial offers an augury of the annual classic's result, but observers said the situation has not been appreciably clarified.
Eleven potential derby candidates took part in the trial, over a muddy track, but Blue Larkspur and Clyde Van Dusen were not among them.

"I'm Going to Beat Him to the Punch and I Figure That'll Lick Him," Says Pittsburgher; Other Bouts on Bill.

"We have met the enemy and they are ours!" Historic words these... but graphically descriptive of the situation as it exists today in respect to the progress of a couple of iron jawed youths who are scheduled to meet more enemies Thursday night in the closing show of the season at the Valley A. C., Wellsville.

Mr. Josephus Todd, of Pittsburgh and thereabouts, is billed in a return match with Freddy Edwards, the Chester welterweight and socker of roses, and is all wrought up over it. Most of the boys who have scrapped with Edwards thus far have not been enthusiastic about rushing into a rematch and Johnny Vivio wasn't anxious about taking the first one, let alone a second.

However, about these enemies, Joe Todd was matched with Gene Doyle, a pretty good fighter from Mansfield, in six rounds at the Washington, (Pa.) Gardens Monday night and the promotional nerves of Mr. Foutts of the Valley A. C., were considerably on edge because of it. A punch on Todd's snout would have just about put the works on Foutts' pugilistic party Thursday night as well as causing considerable pain and injury to Todd's nose.

But Todd's nose and other features are still intact as he came through with flying colors. He won a decision over Doyle in such a way that there was no question about it. After the first couple of rounds Todd got to the Mansfield boy with damaging punches and in the wind-up canto Doyle was on the canvas three times but managed to last it out to the bell.

Todd To Be Heavier.
Todd weighed in for the Doyle bout at 145 1/2 pounds, almost five pounds over the weight he made for Freddy Edwards the last time he battled him. And he does not expect to go below that figure when he enters the ring Thursday night for his second engagement with the Chester puncher.

Despite the fact that Edwards out-slugged him in their first meeting, Todd is quietly confident of the outcome of his six-round meeting with Fred this week.

Knute Joins 220-Pounders In Gay Paree

Lack of Managerial Disputes Makes Him Fat.

By George Axelsson.
PARIS, May 15.—Knute, the lanky Danish heavyweight, who is out for championship honors, is now an honorary member of the two-hundred-and-twenty-pounders of Paris.

"Noot," as he is affectionately called by the non-Scandinavian element that dare not call him "Noot," credits his increase in weight here to absence of managerial disputes.

But Knute is not on a diet. It matters not to him whether he reaches for a sweet or a tenderloin steak. He eats anything not thick enough to drink.

The two-hundred-and-twenty-pounders is an organization made up of gentlemen whose idea of a boyish figure is something between a cask and a hoghead. Before a man can join this select organization he has to tip the beam at 220 pounds or better. When the members meet it is a gigantic layout of lard.

Knute told of his troubles in Cleveland, Ohio, when he was knocked out by a pugilist named K. O. Christner.

times. He knocked out Frankie Myers, drew with Young Sweeney and got a decision in his other bout. He recently beat Johnny Chioda at Johnstown. He's 22 years old and his best weapon is his right.

The Morris-Hart battle is scheduled for six rounds, also, as is the Pat Perrone-Frank Munro bout.

Munro and Perrone are light heavyweights and both are punchers.

Poison Pizzone, Wellsville, and K. O. Franks, East Liverpool, are billed for a four-rounder in which the winner takes all. It will mark Pizzone's first appearance in the ring since the first part of the season when he was knocking them all cold.

Regardless of whether there isn't a nicker's worth of reputation in the whole crowd of them, it looks like an all action card from start to finish and Matchmaker Foutts is looking to one of the best crowds of the campaign in this, the final card.

EAST LIVERPOOL WINS FIELD MEET!

Back in 1916 when the Blue and White track and field squad was one of the finest in the history of the school, East Liverpool DID win the Columbian county field meet, and won it easily, with Ernest Bucher, Ronald Smith, Francis Cannon, George Kidder and many other school stars of that era turning in points in profusion.

In that particular meet, the East Liverpool squad established three new records. The relay team clipped several seconds off the former record, which had been made the year prior, with Smith and Bucher members of that quartet also; and Bucher set a half-mile mark and a record distance in the javelin throw.

Recent publicity disseminated by county field meet sponsors failed to credit Bucher with this half-mile record, which has since been equalled, but not bettered, Bucher and Perkins, the latter of Salem, now sharing the honors.

Bucher, it seems to us, would have made a good coach had he chosen such a career. He was a natural athlete himself, clean living and eminently capable of setting an example for any group of high school boys.

"It seems quite odd that a town the size of East Liverpool should not have a track team," declares Bucher, and expresses the opinion that something possibly is needed to stir up spirit.

In reference to this phase, Bucher says: "In 1916 East Liverpool won the meet easily. I give Mr. Shirick, the coach at that time, much credit, because he was an old track man himself. He trained and performed with the team (Penn State I think) on which was the great Ted Meredith. Shirick was the starting point of the necessary spirit that year."

The 1916 track team which broke the then existing record, was composed of Bucher, Ronald Smith, Francis Cannon and George Kidder. Kidder is teaching in Akron but visits East Liverpool frequently during the school term, especially when he has a Tri-State basketball tournament on his hands. Cannon and Smith are still here and Bucher is in Lisbon.

East Liverpool has turned out a number of fine athletes but we believe Bucher can be rated, without fear of argument, among the best.

His victory in a half-mile race at Mt. Union in 1915 when he rambled down the home stretch fully 75 yards ahead of a field of the best 880-yard men district schools could send to the post on that particular occasion can't easily be forgotten.

Joe Todd, the Pittsburgher, who fights Freddy Edwards tomorrow night at Wellsville, sez to his friends sez he: "Call me Toddy this time—I'm hot."

"Managers got the best of me that evening," said the Scandinavian bruiser.

"Because of the mixup with managers I had some difficulty keeping my mind on that fight, but Christner's fists are not so much."

"I am anxious to see who wins that combat between Schmeling and Paulino in New York. I am afraid that

Major League Rookie "Buys" Hitting Nothing But the Hay

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, May 15.—There are a lot of high powered dissertations being aired these days on the matter of what the lively ball is doing to baseball but I would venture to say that, as far as the average first year man is concerned, major league pitchers undoubtedly are using a very lively sashweight, wrapped up in concrete.

With but few exceptions, notably Alexander and Johnson, of the Tigers; Averill, of the Indians, and Swanson, of the Reds, the bright young men from the minor league are hitting nothing except maybe the hay at night.

They are going hungry in the midst of vast prodigality, for to date the National league has smote 117 home runs to 86 in the American and it seems that everybody and his little brother are intent on making a mug of the much aggrieved pitcher. In fact, if it gets any worse, it will be only right if they play the rest of the averages on a basis of 300-or-no-count. It is all the more disturbing, therefore, that so many of the big-money "buys" are unable to do themselves any good.

There is Dick Porter, for example. He was supposed to be a fool-proof hitter down in Baltimore but, to date, all he has to show in the American league is 214 against his international league average of 350. The Indians finally took him gently but firmly out of there and right now he is sitting on the bench in a highly sensational manner.

So is Charley Gelbert, who came to the Cardinals from Rochester with a 340 record. He was hitting only 219 when they pulled him out of the lineup some days ago and yesterday he got back again long enough to go hitless in three additional times at bat.

Scarrett, of the Red Sox, hit 354 in the minors last year but unofficially today he wasn't much, if anything, over 200. Hal Rhyne, of the same outfit, is around 200, too, although he hit 312 on the coast last year. This might be worse, at that, as Earl Sheely, another coast leaguer, is proceeding to prove. The Pirates juggled their man-power to make room for Sheely, who hit 381 against class A pitching last year and, according to all accounts, never should have escaped from the major leagues in the first place. Today, his average may be 240 but I wouldn't go out and bet my sleeve garters on it.

Nick Cullop, having hit 211 in the National league as against 358 in the Southern Association in 1928, already has been turned back to Atlanta by the Dodgers, and Johnny Frederick, another product of the south, isn't covering himself with garlands of penulas, either. He was hitting 240 against his southern record of 359 at last reports.

To mark the Universal Postal Union Conference in London this year, English post office experts designed a new series of stamps.

Forbidden Door

Story of Adventurous Youth, Mystery, Fortune and a Girl.

By Herman Landon

Hannan woke to the pealing of Old Winthrop's clock in the next room. It was 4 o'clock in the morning. He turned over on his side and reached for his package of cigarettes. His shoulder had not aching so badly, although Dr. Speck had not been there to dress the wound for a long time. After several hours' sleep, interwoven with dreams of disembodied voices, vanishing candles, and a brief but heavenly kiss bestowed by the most wonderful girl who ever had the misfortune to find herself in an entombed house, he felt rested and eager for activity.

He lighted the candle and stood up. A little stiffly and with a wince of pain he put on the dressing gown and dropped Viola Lane's little pistol into his pocket. A spell of dizziness came, but it passed quickly. He moved experimentally across the floor. Yes, he felt strong enough to make a little tour of investigation at this early morning hour. There was no clear course of action in his mind, but he could endure no more idleness.

He moved toward the door, and then he paused abruptly. Somebody was coming. He heard footsteps moving straight toward his door, and they impressed him in a most curious way.

Now the door knob rattled gently. Evidently John Breck was taking his duties as bodyguard very lightly, for the caller entered without hindrance.

"Awake, Hannan?" came Horace Peters' voice.

"Come right in," Hannan invited.

He looked down at Peters' neatly polished shoes as the little man entered and took a chair.

"Haven't slept a wink," Peters confessed. "There was a big book under his arm. 'Don't see how anybody can sleep in this place. Been awake long?'"

"Only a few minutes."

"Then you don't mind if I intrude. I've got to talk to somebody or I'll go plumb cuckoo. Guess what I've been doing to while away the uneasy hours, Hannan? Reading the encyclopedia. Struck something interesting. Lend me your car."

He opened the book on his knees and lowered his top-heavy head. His misshapen features were aglow with interest. "Here we are. It has to do with clocks. Just listen to this."

Peters read while Hannan studied his face with a fixed, alert expression: "Finally, in the early stages of clockmaking, a mechanism was introduced by which the water, as it fell drop by drop, turned a little wheel which moved the hands on the face of the dial and so marked the hour." Significant, eh, Hannan?

"Well, it suggests a theory with regard to Old Winthrop's clock," Hannan admitted guardedly.

"You bet it does. And so beautifully simple! No winding, no trouble of any kind. The water keeps dripping and the clock keeps running, and it goes on that way till hell freezes over and the water turns to ice. The only question is, and Peters rubbed his chin, is a thoughtful way, 'where does the water come from and what makes it drop?'"

"It's a puzzle," said Hannan absently.

"I've heard," Peters remarked, "that in the early days of his experimenting Old Winthrop had an old Swiss clockmaker associated with him. That's suggestive, eh?"

Hannan spoke with a note of reserve totally different from his usual open and candid manner. "Seen Pelly lately?"

"Pelly be damned!" Peters exploded. "I've done his dirty work long enough—or pretended to do it. As soon as I get out of here—if I ever do—I'm going to tell him politely to go to blazes. I've stood for his bullying long enough. I want to call my soul my own once more, even if I go to jail for it." In his excitement Peters got up and began to pace the floor. "That's how I feel, Hannan. When my times comes I want to die with a clear conscience. As the great Horace once said—'But Horace has been a long time dead.'"

"So he has," Hannan remarked, watching the other man's strut-like progress across the narrow floor. "I wonder what Horace thought of creaking shoes."

"Eh?" Peter stopped and gazed blankly at the young man.

"It's too bad," Hannan paraphrased, "that old Horace didn't hand down his opinion of creaking shoes to posterity."

Peters wagged his head. "That's a joke, I suppose. I've lost my sense of humor. My funnybone cracked when the roof did. They didn't wear shoes in Horace's days. They wore sandals, and sandals don't creak."

"That was fortunate for them. Creaking shoes are awkward things when one is bent on murder. Yours creak, I notice."

"Do they? I hadn't observed it. Yes, come to think of it, I guess they do. But it makes no difference. I'm not bent on murder. I'm an honest man—or as honest as I can be with Mallingham's dangling the Damocles sword of my dark past over my head. Nevertheless, I'm a sadly misunderstood man, Hannan. Old Winthrop misunderstood me. You misunderstood me once."

"Twice," Hannan corrected him.

"Twice?" The other looked at him narrowly. "I don't get that. Well, no matter. The avalanche flattened my intellect. Lucky it didn't flatten my body, too. You asked me if I had seen Mallingham. No, not since last night."

"Tell me something, Peters. What is Mallingham looking for?"

"Don't you know?"

"Haven't the faintest idea."

"Well—" Peters looked about him a little nervously. "I don't know as we ought to talk about it here. Mallingham has ears like a radio. And he gets the oddest notions into his head. What do you know? He suspects I killed Curry."

"Really?"

"Preposterous, isn't it? Mallingham hasn't said it in so many words, but he has done a lot of dark hinting. Peters screwed his mottled face into a look of virtuous indignation. "Just as if I would be capable of a thing like that!"

"Well, you see, Mallingham has a suspicion that I am double-crossing him. He's had that suspicion ever since you turned up alive here at Valhalla Notch, after I gave him the way he thinks I am, my aim would be to rob the acids. His logic isn't so bad. If I were double-crossing him the way he thinks I am, my aim would be to rob the stuff behind his back and make for the tall timber."

"What stuff?"

"The—er—stuff Mallingham is looking for. I think Curry knew exactly where it was. I have a hunch he knew a way to get around the iron door, too. So, you see, if I had been trying to beat Mallingham to it, my surest bet would have been to pump Curry for some private information."

"But Curry wouldn't have told, even if he had anything to tell."

"Not willingly, perhaps. But there's always a way to make even the most tight-mouthed man talk."

"You mean—torture?"

"Not necessarily. Threats and intimidation are enough sometimes. Now, Curry was evidently kidnapped in the hall off the library where his wooden cigar was found. Some twelve hours later he was murdered."

"Why wasn't he murdered at once? Because the abductor wanted to try various modes of persuasion on him in the meantime. When they failed he had to kill Curry for his own self-protection. Logical, isn't it?"

"Quite convincing," said Hannan. "I believe your theory is correct, Peters."

The other man winced a little. "It isn't my theory," he protested. "It's Mallingham's."

"Well, it seems to fit the case. The only thing I can't understand is why plots and counterplots of that sort should be going on in a house that may crash down over the heads of its occupants any moment. Do you know, Peters, I have a little theory of my own. A partial theory, that is—one that supplements Pelly's. As you know, I was with Curry as he died. The murderer was still in the room. He thought I was trying to block his escape, and so he ran a knife into my shoulder."

"Yes?" said Peters. "But you didn't see the murderer, did you?"

"No. He came up on me from behind. I didn't get the merest glimpse of him."

Forbidden Door

Story of Adventurous Youth, Mystery, Fortune and a Girl.

By Herman Landon

Hannan woke to the pealing of Old Withrop's clock in the next room. It was 4 o'clock in the morning. He turned over on his side and reached for his package of cigarettes. His shoulder was not aching so badly, although Dr. Speck had not been there to dress the wound for a long time. After several hours' sleep, interwoven with dreams of disembodied voices, vanishing candles, and a brief but heavenly kiss bestowed by the most wonderful girl who ever had the misfortune to find herself in an entombed house, he felt rested and eager for activity.

He lighted the candle and stood up. A little stiffly and with a wince of pain he put on the dressing gown and dropped Viola Lane's little pistol into his pocket. A spell of dizziness came, but it passed quickly. He moved experimentally across the floor. Yes, he felt strong enough to make a little tour of investigation at this early morning hour. There was no clear course of action in his mind, but he could endure no more idleness.

He moved toward the door, and then he paused abruptly. Somebody was coming. He heard footsteps moving straight toward his door, and they impressed him in a most curious way.

Now the door knob rattled gently. Evidently John Breck was taking his duties as bodyguard very lightly, for the caller entered without hindrance.

"Awake, Hannan?" came Horace Peters' voice.

"Come right in," Hannan invited.

He looked down at Peters' neatly polished shoes as the little man entered and took a chair.

"Haven't slept a wink," Peters confessed. "There was a big book under his arm. 'Don't see how anybody can sleep in this place. Been awake long?'"

"Only a few minutes."

"Then you don't mind if I intrude. I've got to talk to somebody or I'll go plumb cuckoo. Guess what I've been doing to while away the uneasy hours, Hannan? Reading the encyclopedia. Struck something interesting. Lend me your ears."

He opened the book on his knees and lowered his top-heavy head. His misshapen features were aglow with interest. "Here we are. It has to do with clocks. Just listen to this."

Peters read while Hannan studied his face with a fixed, alert expression: "Finally, in the early stages of clockmaking, a mechanism was introduced by which the water, as it fell drop by drop, turned a little wheel which moved the hands on the face of the dial and so marked the hour." Significant, eh, Hannan?

"Well, it suggests a theory with regard to Old Withrop's clock," Hannan admitted guardedly.

"You bet it does. And so beautifully simple! No winding, no trouble of any kind. The water keeps dripping and the clock keeps running, and it goes on that way till hell freezes over and the water turns to ice. The only question is, 'where does the water come from and what makes it drop?'"

"It's a puzzle," said Hannan absently.

"I've heard," Peters remarked, "that in the early days of his experimenting Old Withrop had an old Swiss clockmaker associated with him. That's suggestive, eh?"

Hannan spoke with a note of reserve totally different from his usual open and candid manner. "Seen Polly lately?"

"Polly be damned!" Peters exploded. "I've done his dirty work long enough—or pretended to do it. As soon as I get out of here—if I ever do—I'm going to tell him politely to go to blazes. I've stood for his bullying long enough. I want to call my soul my own once more, even if I go to jail for it." In his excitement Peters got up and began to pace the floor. "That's how I felt, Hannan. When my times comes I want to die with a clear conscience. As the great Horace once said—'But Horace has been a long time dead.'"

"So he has," Hannan remarked, watching the other man's strut-like progress across the narrow floor. "I wonder what Horace thought of creaking shoes."

"Eh?" Peters stopped and gazed blankly at the young man.

"It's too bad," Hannan paraphrased, "that old Horace didn't hand down his opinion of creaking shoes to posterity."

Peters wagged his head. "That's a joke, I suppose. I've lost my sense of humor. My funnybone cracked when the roof did. They didn't wear shoes in Horace's days. They wore sandals, and sandals don't creak."

"That was fortunate for them. Creaking shoes are awkward things when one is bent on murder. Yours creak, I notice."

"Do they?" Hannan observed. "Yes, come to think of it, I guess they do. But it makes no difference. I'm not bent on murder. I'm an honest man—or as honest as I can be with Mallingham dangling the Damocles sword of my dark past over my head. Nevertheless, I'm a sadly misunderstood man, Hannan. Old Withrop misunderstood me. You misunderstood me once."

"Twice," Hannan corrected him.

"Twice?" The other looked at him narrowly. "I don't get that. Well, no matter. The avalanche flattened my intellect. Lucky it didn't flatten my body, too. You asked me if I had seen Mallingham. No, not since last night."

"Tell me something, Peters. What is Mallingham looking for?"

"Don't you know?"

"Haven't the faintest idea."

"Well—" Peters looked about him a little nervously. "I don't know as we ought to talk about it here. Mallingham has ears like a radio. And he gets the oddest notions into his head. What do you know? He suspects I killed Curry."

"Really?"

"Preposterous, isn't it? Mallingham hasn't said it in so many words, but he has done a lot of dark hinting. Peters screwed his mottled face into a look of virtuous indignation. "Just as if I would be capable of a thing like that!"

"Well, you see, Mallingham has a suspicion that I am double-crossing him. He's had that suspicion ever since you turned up alive here at Vallhalla Notch, after I gave him the way he thinks I am, my aim would be to rob the acids. His logic isn't so bad. If I were double-crossing him the way he thinks I am, my aim would be to rob the stuff behind his back and make for the tall timber."

"What stuff?"

"The—er—stuff Mallingham is looking for. I think Curry knew exactly where it was. I have a hunch he knew a way to get around the iron door, too. So, you see, if I had been trying to beat Mallingham to it, my surest bet would have been to pump Curry for some private information."

"But Curry wouldn't have told, even if he had anything to tell."

"Not willingly, perhaps. But there's always a way to make even the most tight-mouthed man talk."

"You mean—torture?"

"Not necessarily. Threats and intimidation are enough sometimes. Now, Curry was evidently kidnaped in the hall off the library where his wooden cigar was found. Some twelve hours later he was murdered."

"Why wasn't he murdered at once? Because the abductor wanted to try various modes of persuasion on him. In the meantime. When they failed he had to kill Curry for his own self-protection. Logical, isn't it?"

"Quite convincing," said Hannan. "I believe your theory is correct, Peters."

The other man winced a little. "It isn't my theory," he protested. "It's Mallingham's."

"Well, it seems to fit the case. The only thing I can't understand is why plots and counterplots of that sort should be going on in a house that may crash down over the heads of its occupants any moment. Do you know, Peters, I have a little theory of my own. A partial theory, that is—one that supplements Polly's. As you know, I was with Curry as he died. The murderer was still in the room. He thought I was trying to block his escape, and so he ran a knife into my shoulder."

"Yes?" said Peters. "But you didn't see the murderer, did you?"

"No. He came up on me from behind. I didn't get the merest glimpse of him."

Mr. Archie Ankrom Says Since Taking "ORANGE ROOT" His Strength Has Returned Two-fold, Feels Peppy and Energetic and Advises All Those in a Rundown Condition to Take Lots of It.

"ORANGE ROOT" brought me back to HEALTH with a BANG!" says Mr. Archie Ankrom, of 739 Buckeye avenue, Wellsville, Ohio, near East Liverpool. Mr. Ankrom is connected with the M. K. Dutty Contracting company, and is well known and respected thru-out this whole section. He continues, "Stomach trouble has been the bane of my life. For the past 2 years it has robbed me of strength, made me nervous and kept me in untold agony. Food felt like a ball of fire in my stomach and caused a burning sensation hard to explain. I was afraid to eat for fear of the terrible consequences sure to follow. I dwindled down till I was but a shadow of my former self. I have wasted many dollars trying to find something to relieve me, but nothing did me any good till I started the Orange Root treatment. Since taking it and the golden Nuggets, I notice that I do not become nervous after eating, and what I eat seems to do me a world of good, for my strength has returned two-fold, and I feel energized and full of pep. It is remarkable how quickly all tiredness left

CAMPGROUND AT DIXONVILLE TO GET WATER

Free Methodists Will Also Bury Gas Lines.

ERECT COTTAGES

Annual Ten-day Camp-meeting Will Open July 5.

Permanent additions that include city water, buried gas lines and a supply of tents that will be the property of the Rochester district of the Pittsburgh conference which annually sponsors the departure, will be made at the Dixonville campground, in anticipation of the Free Methodists' 10-day campmeeting which opens July 5. It was announced today.

More than $1,000 will be spent in these improvements. Final plans will be made at a meeting of the district pastors in a new church of the denomination just erected in Weirton, W. Va.

Two cottages are now in the course of erection. Some six or eight more are planned.

Districts Will Buy Tents. The old system of owning tents as a conference and shipping them from point to point as used has been found to be freighted with too much expense. To lessen costs of operation it has been decided that each of the five districts of the Pittsburgh conference own its own tents. Those in stock have been divided, the Rochester district procuring between 40 and 50. Twenty new "tops" will be purchased. There will be about 60 to 75 tents on the grounds in addition to the cottages this year.

The dining room, which will be improved, will seat between 75 and 100 persons at a time.

The lighting system is in good condition.

Little work, if any, will be necessary on the fences.

Spring water was utilized when the campmeeting was first held on its present location. It was later condemned by the health board. Last year a temporary arrangement of pipes on the surface of the ground enabled water to be piped from Thompson park. This year it is proposed to bury the pipes.

The same departure will be taken for permanency of the gas supply demanded.

Work on these improvements will be begun next week.

Interest in Meetings. Already interest in the forthcoming event is noted throughout the district. In this manner many of the members spend their annual vacations and outings.

The meetings will be under the direct charge of the Rev. Dr. D. W. Ross, district superintendent of New Brighton, Pa. One of the leading ministers of the church. A pastor at Greenville, Ill., will in all probability be chosen as the visiting speaker.

Members of the Free Methodist church of Avondale street have supervision of the grounds. Through their pastor, the Rev. S. E. West, who came here several months ago from McKeesport, Pa., many of the plans for the meetings will be made.

COUNCIL CHIEF IN HOSPITAL

Charles E. Hayes, president of council, who suffered an attack of heart disease in his home in Pennsylvania avenue, was removed yesterday afternoon to the City hospital.

His brother, Harvey R. Hayes, Pennsylvania avenue, was admitted Wednesday to the Rocky Glen sanatorium at McConnellsville, O.

MISSION SOCIETY PLANS PROGRAM

Members of the Women's Missionary society of the Boyce Methodist Episcopal church will give their annual entertainment and demonstration at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the church.

The program, which will include a short playlet, will be in charge of Mrs. Claude Ruckman, president of the society.

A. L. White, Ohio avenue, attended the district convention of the Ohio Building and Loan associations at Alliance yesterday.

"The Gypsy" Tie

The "Save Arch" Secret—

Its secret lies partially in correct last measurements which insure a proper balance of weight, but chiefly in arch molded counters as found in Save Arch Shoes, this long moulded counter forms a firm, but yet elastic support for the inner arch. It prevents the inward roll of the foot, a movement which throws the ligaments and bone structure of the foot out of place and frequently leads to serious foot ills.
